

Ideally the area bees travel to collect pollen is as small as possible to have detailed data that can serve as an indicator for biodiversity and soil quality.